AMERICAN METHODS STUGESTED.

The crowds talked freely and openly of forming vigitance committees and performing the duties of such organizations, once for all teaching the American season that they will never forget. Other men, in groups, told their listeners of the work done by the vigitance committee in san Francisco years ago, when the lawless element threatened to take full possession of the pince, and it was urged that unless the government speedily toon some action to put down the Americans the people would themselves take the matter in hand, lynch the leaders, and drive the smaller fry from the country.

the body presented quite a fresh appearance.

I pon invitation of the Chair Colonel John B. Carv, of the Cleveland Club, addressed the committee briefly, and Mr. Ferriter having moved that the delegates to the State convention be elected by a primary. Colonel Cary advocated that plan. Mr. Rowry said he had no objection to a primary provided it was not such a primary as we have recently gone through, or if it was not conducted at Third Jefferson by the men who recently had charge there. He moved to amend Mr. Ferriter's motion by adding that the vote be rice voce.

Mr. Flourney said he was superintendent of Jefferson Ward, and he would see that none of the men who officiated at the Third Precinct in the last primary had anything to do with the next election.

A guestion of Money.

A guestion of Money.

An hour after this weeding another marriage took place in the same church, and as this tole lowed so closely after the other nearly all the ore.

A QUESTION OF MONEY.

Mr. Hicks said he favored a primary, but he wanted to know where the money for it was to come from. That was the question to be settled. As regards the municipal primary he did not agree with some people who had animadverted so severely on it. With the exception of the transactions at the Third Presinct in Jefferson Ward the muricipal primary was as fair as Ward the municipal primary was as fair as any ever held and reflected credit on the

Mr. Phillips thought Mr. Hicks had touched the main question. The subject should be referred to the Committee on Plans that they might examine into how the money was to be raised.

Mr. Wellace said he was in accord with Messrs, Hicks and Phillips, but he would go further. The question was not so much whether the committee could raise the money as whether they should. It was a bad plan to go before the public too often for money to pay for contests within the costs.

Mr. Snellings said he thought there had been too much unnecessary talk about money. Colonel Cary had said he would be responsible for one half the money necessary. He (Snellings) thought with the little influence he had he could raise the other half.

Mr. Hicks, replying to Mr. Snellings. said it was easy enough to talk about rusing money, but they had no victims this time.

Mr. Hall favored a primary. He said there were 500 people in Richmond who wanted to go to the convention, and he thought the money could be easily raised. We had to elect ninety-six delegates, and he believed the aspirants would be willing to pay $4 apiece.

Chairman wood's views.

Chairman Wood took the floor and antagonized the proposition that the committee go on the public for the money. The committee should be ashamed to do this. The question ought to be, What is the just and the right way to get at the choice of the people? He was infavar of taxing those who ran. The committee should decide whether a primary was best, and if they reached that concinsion, or any other The Temps, expecting that the enemies of the republic will use the Anarchists' attempts as weapons against the government, calls upon all Republicans to rally bround the Ministry.

primary. Mr. Wallace differed with the Chair. He did not think the candidates should be assessed. Most of the workers in the party were puor men. There were men who would like to go to the convention, but who did not have the money. The consequence would be that some one else would pay their assessments and have them under their domination. This was the great evil he apprehended from a primary. The delegates would go to the convention bought. There were ten political organizations in the city which would doubtless like to see delegates go to the convention on this basis.

No damage was done, but the affair has caused much excitement.
